

A Considered Layout Defined by Function

SIZE 33 m² (355 ft²) ◊ 1-2 residents

MOSCOW, RUSSIA • This 1930s apartment measures 33 m² (355 ft²) and is split over two levels. Alireza Nemati of Studio Bazi was tasked with modernizing the interior, which he divided up into clearly defined blocks for various functions. The home now features a neatly organized layout and an airy white and wood scheme.

The entrance to the apartment is on the first floor, with stairs leading down into a living area featuring a built-in bookshelf with hanging space for extra chairs. Beyond this, a block of oak cabinetry houses a petite kitchen and all the necessary appliances. Opposite, pull-out wardrobes and a shower room have been slotted under the stairs. The serene white bedroom is situated at the back of the apartment; a curtain hidden in the wall is a simple fix that allows the bedroom and bathroom to be hidden from view.
